PREMIER'S REMARKS

This year, we also recognize our front-line workers, our health care workers, and all of those essential workers who have been critical to our success in managing COVID-19. As we know, it has been a challenging year. The pandemic has changed so much about how we live and work. But we fared well and have a lot to be proud of. Tonight we get to celebrate our achievements in health and safety; a subject that has been on top of mind for many months. Let me start by thanking Mr. Brendan Harris and your team for the tremendous work you do through the Bermuda Construction Safety Council. Your dedication, commitment and focus to safety and health in our construction industry is evident through your superb training programmes, education initiatives and support - you are to be applauded. This council is an excellent resource for our country. It is essential to recognize both the council and the award winners tonight; you are all integral to our success.
